

ADVERTISEMENT

ADVERTISE WITH US

Front Page » August 15, 2006 » Local News » Range Creek exhibit opens at Utah Museum of Natural History

Published 910 days ago

Range Creek exhibit opens at Utah Museum of Natural History

Print Page Email Page Get Reprints

ADVERTISEMENT

Web Babies
www.castleviewhospital.net

CASTLEVIEW HOSPITAL

300 N. Hospital Drive, Price
637-4800

ADVERTISE WITH US

Until a few years ago, Range Creek was a little-known, rugged canyon in a remote part of Emery County.

It is now one of the richest archaeological resources in the nation with many of its well-preserved remains shedding light on the Fremont tribes that lived there between A.D. 500 and A.D. 1350.

To provide a present-day look at this ancient culture, "Range Creek: An Anthropology of Place" is now open at the Utah Museum of Natural History in Salt Lake City.

The exhibit will feature replicas of a granary and a pit house and other interpretive displays to give us a glimpse of where and how the Fremont existed in the canyon those hundreds of years ago.

"Range Creek" will be a permanent exhibit at the museum.

Admission is $6.00 for adults, $3.50 for children ages 3-12 and seniors. Museum members are admitted for free.

The Utah Museum of Natural History is located at the University of Utah, 1390 East President's Circle (200 South), Salt Lake City. For more information, call (801) 581-6927 or visit www.umnh.utah.edu.

Print Page Email Page Get Reprints

Top of Page

Local News

August 15, 2006

- Hunter Interchange opens: Road project to ease congestion into plant
- Rep. Matheson visits county fair-holds roundtable
- Executive retreat-new way to look at opportunity
- Lands council discusses Washington Co. project
- Range Creek exhibit opens at Utah Museum of Natural History
- Grazing board names members in county
- BLM Holds Coal Lease Sale on Millfork West Tract
- Four Die in I-70 Crash near Green River

Recent Local News

- February 3, 2009
- January 27, 2009
- January 20, 2009
- January 13, 2009
- January 6, 2009

Quick Links

- View Archives
- View August 2006 Archives

Subscribe to section simply click to subscribe

Related Articles

Related Stories

- Range Creek Exhibit is Coming to the Museum of the San Rafael
- Correction
- Range Creek Exhibit visits Museum of the San Rafael
- Range Creek on display
- Range Creek Update

About this feature...

ADVERTISEMENT